

CENTER FOR INDIAN COUNTRY DEVELOPMENT

The mission of the Center for Indian Country Development is to support the prosperity of Native Nations through actionable research, policy development, and community collaboration. CICD's objective is to support the capacity of tribal governments to accelerate economic prosperity and private sector growth by promoting the stability and robustness of tribal revenues.

Center for Indian Country Development: A unique resource of the Federal Reserve System

The Center for Indian Country Development (CICD) based at the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis is a nationally recognized thought leader and clearinghouse for resources and initiatives concerning Native economic development and is a unique resource of the Federal Reserve System, the central bank of the United States.

CICD'S APPROACH INCLUDES:

- Engaging with tribal nations, communities, members, and organizations to understand their opportunities and challenges
- Analyzing tribal economic data and research to generate usable information for practitioners and policymakers
- Influencing decision makers to promote innovative practices and policies

In conducting research and data collection, CICD and its partners are guided by Principles for Research and Data Use intended to honor tribal data sovereignty and governance.

Each year CICD hosts a research summit as part of its work to conduct and support policy-relevant research on key questions that matter for Indian Country.

Prepared by Casey Lozar, Caryn Mohr, and Heather Sobrepena, Center for Indian Country Development, Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis, November 2022